Using Commas Worksheet

Setting Off Nonessential Info

Nonessential info interrupts the flow of a sentence. The writer gives info that may be helpful but isn't needed.

Ex: Mr. Smith, the meanest teacher in the world, took my camera.

Directions: Each of these sentences has nonessential info. Use commas to enclose it. Use only one comma if the nonessential info comes at the end of the sentence.

1. I want Janet who is the fastest girl in our town to join our team.
2. We went to Slurm Burgers the best restaurant of all time and ate dinner.
3. We are leaving on a schooner which is a type of sail boat.
4. The president of the company Mr. David Martin ate a muffin.
5. May I borrow that pencil the sparkly purple one?
6. The Nile River which runs 4,132 miles is the longest river in the world.
7. Jose Martinez the mayor of our town was at the game.
8. My best friend Rob whom I've known for so long wouldn't do such a thing.
9. Arica with 0.03 inches of rainfall a year is the driest city on Earth.
